

Radek Dabrowski's exhibition "Under the Volcano / Under the Volcano" and the accompanying publication are the result of journeys around the world, expeditions that are a test of one's mental and physical capabilities, an opportunity to learn more about oneself as a person and as an artist.

Publication "Under the Volcano. Images and Stories about the Earth" is shared project by the artist Radek Dabrowski and the art historian Katalin Herzog. Emerged from their shared interest in nature as well in response to Dabrowski's new work, they began a collaboration that produced this artist's book.

"Under the Volcano: Images and Stories about the Earth" is a book by Radek Dabrowski and Katalin Herzog that subtly guides viewers and readers to comprehend the complexity of our existence, the power of nature and our dependence upon it. Dabrowski does this through photographs and poetic texts, based on his extensive travels to far-flung, difficult-to-reach locations, where he seeks to understand the intricate connection between humans and nature. In her texts, Herzog interweaves mythological, cultural and scientific ideas that have led to explanations of natural phenomena throughout history. With the association of images and texts, they show a 'journey of discovery' into nature and emphasize the importance of a nature that still is 'pure'.
